Events are moving rapidly in Ireland. On the second day of the Free State's existence gunmen shot one member of the Parliament to death and wounded another.

On that same day, with the echoes of the Dublin assassination sounding in Belfast, Ulster finally and firmly turned her back upon the Free State. Her decision, made in a half-hour, was unanimous in both houses of her Parliament and was on its way to London before dark fell over the Irish Sea.

Cosgrave and Mulcahy, who have taken the places of the dead Griffith and the ambushed Collins, are having their sorrowful hours of decision. Reprisals are ugly things, but the Free State holds that it has no choice in this bloody business that has been forced upon it. It must govern or go. Every man in its Parliament, every soldier in the national uniform, every official of the Free State, is now a target for the gunman's bullet or the assassin's knife.

The ancient bitterness of Celt against Anglo-Saxon has been replaced by a new hate between Irishman and Irishman. The end of that hatred no man may foresee. There was never more than a shadowy chance that Ulster would throw in her fortunes with the Free State. Had Griffith and Collins lived, had peace come quickly in South Ireland and the "die-hards" of DeValera been quieted last summer, Ulster might some day have listened to Dublin's plea for a united Ireland.

Everything that has happened in Ireland in the last twelve months has confirmed the Ulster fears and the Ulster dreads. North Ireland will keep her old place in the British Empire.

A LOST BOY.

"High school too hard, and want to be financially independent." That is the message left by a sixteen-year-old lad who disappeared from school and friends in Ohio last spring. All efforts of his family to find him have failed so far, and now a heart-broken mother is coming to America from Africa, for the purpose of seeking her boy.

There are critics who will say that the boy should have been with his parents or his parents with him, either in Africa where the family had lived as missionaries, or in this country where the children were to get their schooling. Perhaps they were right, although it is difficult to judge the actions of honest and

In the years before he was sent to school in this country, when the boy was growing up with his own father and mother, he failed to learn that success never comes by shirking hard tasks. No sense of respect for his parents or vision of his own educational needs stopped him when he found high school studies irksome. Although he persuaded himself that he was seeking financial independence, is letter betrays the fact that he wanted some short cut to that independence, a sort cut which would enable him to dodge the schooling which he found "too hard."

If parents and boy failed, the high school may be said to have failed as well in this particular case. Neither the spirit of the school nor the sympathy and interest of his teachers reached him. When lessons were too hard to master, no one taught him the wisdom of staying at his assigned tasks, putting forth a little greater effort, overcoming his distaste for studying and so fitting nimself for the independence he desired.

It is an unhappy picture, but one which parents and teachers need to contemplate. This boy may have been weak-willed and houghtless, no worse. There are many such boys and girls whom a quietly spoken word or a sympathetic hand held out at the right moment could save from such folly.

A GOVERNMENT CANAL DOWN EAST FLORIDA.

The taking over, widening and deepening of the East Coast canal from Jacksonville to Miami by the government, which we have reason to believe is being favorably considered, will mean scross. They are achieved by going to we all must conform. It may not be great things not only to the East Coast, but to all Florida. Despite a present canal depth at some places of three feet or less of the brow shaved off, leaving a many boats are operating on the canal.

It is estimated that not less than 200 tons of freight are slender, well arched brows are always brought into Daytona every week by canal boats, to say nothing of the hundreds of tons that go to other points. With a imitation. depth of eight feet big passenger and freight steamers, such as the Clyde Line operates on the St. Johns, would be certain to establish lines along the inland waterway.

Instead of thousands the tonnage of freight would go into the millions and the opening up of another route of commerce along the East Coast additional to one railroad would mean unprecedented growth and development.

The transportation of freight and passengers, while enormous and the only matters which the government considers, would by no means be the only asset the inland waterway would prove. Already hundreds of yachts work their way down the canal each year, and with a greater depth of water these yachts would increase to thousands.

In every town where a yacht ties up to the dock a benefit is received. The operation of yachts is expensive, in supplies, crew wages and recreation for the owner and his party. The yachtsman leaves money in every town where he stops.

And since they have come to recognize the fact that the tourist is Florida's most valuable crop, with a deep water canal from Jacksonville to Miami, Florida could make a bid for pleasure craft that would appeal to the entire yachting world.

CHEAPER THAN FIRE.

The following list of suggestive questions is proposed as an aid to fire prevention activities. It has been presented to the school children of one community, and they are urged to take the list home for their parents' inspection.

- 1. Is there any rubbish piled up in basement or cellar? Are floors under coal and wood stoves protected with
- metal? Do you put hot ashes in wooden barrels?
 - Do you keep matches out of reach of children?
- Are the chimneys in good repair? Have they been cleaned recently?
 - 6. Do stove pipes pass through attics or closets?
- Are any gas connections made with rubber tubing? 8. Do you use a dustless oil mop? If so, where is it kept achieved by hairline effects!
- when not in use? 9. Do you use an electric iron? Do you always disconnect

10. Do you know how to turn in an alarm?

SANTA'S BELLS.

The children hear the ringing of Santa's string of bells, as he comes blithely swinging across the moors and fells. They hear his reindeer loping beneath the wintry sky, they listen, and they're hoping he will not pass them by. I listen too, but only discordant things I hear; the night is dark and lonely, the wind is bleak and drear. The snow is on the gables, the wind beats at the door, and I am old and fables appeal to me no more. I have a golden chalice, a diamond-studded fan; I'm living in a palace, I have a rich sedan; I'm decked in purple raiment, I have a costly lyre, I'm fixed to make the payment for all I may desire; my aunts, in priceless sables, go sloshing through the mart, but snow is on the gables, and snow is on my heart. I listen for the ringing that only children hear; I listen for the singing of Santa to his deer. And I would give my plunder, my lyre and dachshund too, if I could hear and wonder, as little children do. There are no elves or witches, or fairies by the streams; but all an old man's riches aren't worth a bairnie's dreams.

SANTA'S BELLS.

The children hear the ringing of Santa's string of bells, as he comes blithely swinging across the moors and fells. They hear his reindeer loping beneath the wintry sky, they listen, and they're hoping he will not pass them by. I listen too, but only discordant things I hear; the night is dark and lonely, the wind is bleak and drear. The snow is on the gables, the wind beats at the door, and I am old and fables appeal to me no more. I have a golden chalice, a diamond-studded fan; I'm living in a palace, I have a rich sedan; I'm decked in purple raiment, I have a costly lyre, I'm fixed to make the payment for all I may desire; my aunts, in priceless sables, go sloshing through the mart, but snow is on the gables, and snow is on my heart. I listen for the ringing that only children hear; I listen for the singing of Santa to his deer. And I would give my plunder, my lyre and dachshund too, if I could hear and wonder, as little children do. There are no elves or witches, or fairies by the streams; but all an old man's riches aren't worth a bairnie's dreams.

How to Make Pine Cough Syrup at Home

You know that pine is used in nearly all prescriptions and remedies for coughs. The reason is that pine contains several peculiar elements that have a remarkable effect in soothing and healing the membranes of the throat and chest. Pine is famous for this purpose.

Pine cough syrups are combinations of pine and syrup. The "syrup" part of pine and syrup. The syrup is usually plain sugar syrup.

To make the best pine cough remedy that money can buy, put 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle, and fill up with home-made sugar syrup. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn instead of sugar syrup. Either syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you make a full pint—more than you can buy ready-made for three times the money. It is pure good and very pleasant—children take it eagerly.

You can feel this take hold of a cough

The cough may be dry, hoarse and tight, or may be persistently loose from the formation of phlegm. The cause is the same—inflamed membranes—and this same inflamed membranes. same—inflamed memoranes—and this Pinex and Syrup combination will stop it—usually in 24 hours or less. Long Distance reaches out for more business. It brings buyers right to your elbow. It goes straight to the man you want to reach, without loss of time or energy and gives you personal contact.

To save about 20 per cent on your Long Distance charges, tell the operator that you want to make a "Station-to-Station" call; that is, that you will talk with ANYONE at the distant point instead of asking for a particular person.

Further savings of 15 to 75 per cent can be made by use of the evening and night "Station-to-Station" service when the day rate is more than 25 cents.

LONG Distance Telephone Service is business building. Are you making full use of it?

Long Distance reaches out for more business. It brings buyers right to your elbow. It goes straight to the man you want to reach, without loss of time or energy and gives you personal contact.

To save about 20 per cent on your Long Distance charges, tell the operator that you want to make a "Station-to-Station" call; that is, that you will talk with ANYONE at the distant point instead of asking for a particular person.

Further savings of 15 to 75 per cent can be made by use of the evening and night "Station-to-Station" service when the day rate is more than 25 cents.
